New Delhi, Mar 9 (PTI) Stakeholders of healthcare industry recently met to exchange perspectives on the role technology can play in transforming healthcare access, delivery and outcomes in India, as well as globally.

The event, held at the IIT-Delhi, also saw entrepreneurs competing with each other on innovative ideas for products aimed at improving patient and population health, a statement said.

The challenge winner was Health Vectors that has developed a personal health analytics engine for patients and industry stakeholders to offer hyper-personal, actionable insights to help eradicate chronic diseases.

"Health Vectors is now squarely focused on explosive growth in hospitals, insurance companies, and corporate verticals," Subhasish Sircar, founder and CEO of Health Vectors, said. PTI SR JM
